

Biography for Jen Miller

Dr. Jen Miller is a wildlife conservationist dedicated to protecting biodiversity and strengthening human-wildlife coexistence globally. Her research has informed wildlife policy and management on issues such as wildlife trafficking, human-wildlife conflict, endangered species conservation and protected area management. She brings a global perspective to her work, with experience in Asia, Africa, Latin America and North America. Jen also teaches meditation classes to help conservationists develop resilience to navigate the heart-aching ecological and social crises of our planet.

In 2020, Jen joined the Combating Wildlife Trafficking Branch of the International Affairs program in the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service as an International Program Specialist. Here, she serves as a program officer, grantmaker and policy advisor to combat wildlife trafficking. From 2017-2020, she was a Senior Scientist in the Center for Conservation Innovation at Defenders of Wildlife, providing scientific guidance for law, policy and field conservation programs dedicated to protecting North America's threatened and endangered species. In this role she also contributed to wildlife science and advocacy related to the US-Mexico border wall, climate change and illegal wildlife trade. Prior to joining Defenders, Jen worked as a Postdoctoral Researcher with Panthera, UC-Berkeley, Cornell University and the University of Cape Town studying the ecology and conservation of African lions and leopards. Her PhD research, done in affiliation with the Wildlife Institute of India and in collaboration with WWF-India, explored the realities and people's perceptions of tiger and leopard depredation on livestock and developed predictive models to support management decision-making.

Jen has published 30+ peer-reviewed papers in scientific journals such as Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences of the USA (PNAS), PLOS Biology, Conservation Biology and Ecology and op-eds in Scientific American and Economic & Political Weekly. Her work has received press coverage by international media outlets including the BBC World News, New York Times and Washington Post. Jen is a Fulbright Scholar, a Critical Language Scholar and a National Science Foundation Graduate Scholar, and has received awards for the practical applications of her science. She earned a PhD in Ecology from the Yale School of Forestry & Environmental Studies in 2015 and a BA in Organismal Biology from Claremont McKenna College in 2007. She is also a Certified iRest® Yoga Nidra Meditation Teacher and an Ordained Minister through the Universal Life Church.

As a vegetarian and childfree individual, Jen aims to align her actions with her environmental values. Outside the office, she enjoys meditation, bird watching, painting wildlife, baking pies and kayaking with her ornithologist husband Dr. Sahas Barve and fellow-birdwatcher cats Idli and Chakli. Jen is based in central Florida and works remotely for the Washington, DC headquarters of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.
